

Who Am I?
by YahZion EL

I've spend my whole life searching for something I needed to find.

Searching endlessly for something that I know is divine.

Searching deep within my self in awe to what I would find.

It was something that I lost in my past far far behind.

Never happy and never satisfied, I continue my search for the universal treasures of my mind.

Looking high and looking low not completely sure what it is, I needed to know.

Turning over every stone and walking through every door. Self-determine to find my inner soul.

Alone in my quest, no one but my self. Searching through the portals of my mind to find what I know is best.

Not yet complete and not yet incomplete. My psychic mind knows there is something not right within me.

So as I go, I go with a open heart. Knowing that those whom thought they knew me, never knew me from the start.

To know me, is to know yourself. Always continue to re-invent your inner self.